AT A GLANCE

The journey

Most safaris are planned around seeing as much as possible. This one is planned around feeling well while you do it.

You spend three nights in Arusha before the safari, so that jet lag has passed before you set off. The safari itself stays at least two nights almost everywhere: Tarangire, a farm lodge in the Karatu highlands, and the Serengeti. Game drives are shorter and the schedule is flexible. If you would rather sleep in or spend the afternoon at the lodge, that is no problem. In Ngorongoro Crater you go down for the morning only.

Lodges are chosen for comfort and ease of movement: ground-floor rooms where possible and short walks to meals.

Good for: older travellers, anyone with limited mobility, and people who simply prefer a gentle pace. The journey back from the Serengeti is long by road, and we recommend the scheduled flight instead.
