AT A GLANCE

The journey

This itinerary takes the standard week-long safari and puts the extra day where it counts most, in the Serengeti.

After a day in Tarangire you drive to the central Serengeti for three nights. One full day is given to finding the migration herds, wherever they are within reach, and a second to the predators and plains game around Seronera. Having two full days also means a slow morning or a long lunch at camp does not cost you anything.

On the way back you descend into Ngorongoro Crater, then continue to Moshi. The last day is free for a walk to Materuni waterfall, a swim at the Chemka hot springs, or a rest by the pool.

Good for: travellers who want more Serengeti than the usual two nights, and anyone who likes a quiet day before a long flight.
