AT A GLANCE

Experience Overview

Most short safaris try to fit in four parks. This one puts all its time into one, so that you see the Serengeti properly.

You drive in from Arusha across the Ngorongoro highlands and spend three nights in a tented camp inside the park. That gives two full days and two half-days of game drives in a private 4x4, enough to follow the migration wherever it is in the month you travel and to spend unhurried time with lion, leopard and cheetah.

One morning starts before dawn with a hot-air balloon flight. You drift low over the plains for about an hour as the sun comes up, then land for breakfast in the bush. On the way out of the park you stop at a Maasai boma in the conservation area.

Good for: travellers who care most about the migration and big cats and would rather go deep than wide. Tell us your dates so that the camp can be placed in the right part of the park. Balloon flights depend on weather and have a minimum age, usually seven.
