AT A GLANCE

Experience Overview

If you have a single day for a safari from Arusha, Tarangire is the park to choose. It is two hours away on a good road, large enough to feel wild, and in the dry season it holds more elephants than anywhere else in northern Tanzania.

The game drive follows the Tarangire River, the only permanent water for a huge area. From June to October the animals come to it: elephant families digging in the sand for water, lines of zebra and wildebeest, giraffe, buffalo, impala and, in the trees and long grass, the lions and leopards that hunt them. The baobabs are a sight in themselves, some with trunks several metres across and hollowed out by elephants.

You travel in a private 4x4 with a pop-up roof and eat a picnic lunch at a site overlooking the river.

Good for: travellers on a tight schedule, people in Arusha on business, and as a first taste before a longer safari. From November to May many animals move out of the park, though the birding is then at its best.
